All information contained herein supersedes what is provided in the lab manuals. Physics is an experimental science and, while it is true that progress in physics has always relied on the contributions of theorist, the ultimate test of their theories takes place in the laboratory. The experiments in this course cover most of the topics you will encounter in your lecture course. They will be ...

Physics I&II Lab Syllabus - Florida International University

The experiments that we will be doing in this lab are fairly simple. By that I mean we will be measuring physical quantities directly; for example, lengths, masses, and time intervals. The experimental side of research physics, however, has moved way beyond such simple types of measurement. Regardless of the sophistication of the experiment ...
